BURGLARS BREAK IN GLASS MEAT MARKET

Dropping of Old Till on the Floor Wakens a Family Residing Next Door.

Last night about midnight burglars entered the Rock Island meat market, 2009 Fourth avenue, of which A. P. Glass is proprietor, but it is thought that they got nothing more than a few pennies which were lifted from the cash register.

The safe was untouched, but a desk was ransacked and a till formerly used was torn from the counter, but it contained nothing. The thieves gained entrance by forcing the lock on the door of a store house adjoining the meat market.

The window between the store house and the shop was cut and the latch raised. Raising the window the burglars went into the shop in search of booty, but they were seemingly amateurs, as the safe was not tampered with.

In taking the unused till from the counter the burglars let it fall to the floor and the racket was heard by a neighboring family. Thinking that they were discovered, the culprits made a hasty retreat. The present prices of meat, it appears, are enough to warrant a hungry man to steal from the meat market man, but these fellows, it appears, were after money only.
